01 MOVING TO THE STAVANGER REGION

If you are contemplating the idea of making Norway your future home, you likely have numerous questions regarding the practicalities of relocating to this country. What steps should you take in preparation, and what alternatives are available to you? This guide aims to provide a comprehensive overview of the essential tasks and factors you should take into account when considering a move to Norway.

CHECKLIST

BEFORE ARRIVING IN NORWAY

- Passport: must be valid for at least three months after arrival.
- Visa, if applicable.
- Work permit, if applicable.
- Proof of sufficient financial means for the initial month.
- Birth certificate(s).
- Marriage certificate.
- Divorce decree(s) that include any financial agreement(s) or alimony.
- Academic certificates: if possible, have them translated into Norwegian Recognition scheme hkdir.no
- Professional or vocational certificates and work records.
- Schengen certificate (needed for narcotic medicines).
- Medical records if you would like to transfer treatment to Norway.
- Vaccination records or certificates (especially for children); preferably an international standard vaccination card (WHO vaccination certificate).

- Bank card that works in Norway
- No-claim certificate from previous car insurance company.
- Child benefit claims from another country usually provide information on your last payment date and registration date. Check your relevant documentation for these details.
- Proof of purchase: Duty tax might be charged on expensive items. It is advisable to be able to document receipts of such purchases when brought into the country.
- Documentation for the importation of cars, plants, foods, and animals.

WORK AND RESIDENCE PERMITS

THE NORWEGIAN DIRECTORATE OF IMMIGRATION (UDI)

As a rule, you must hold a residence permit to be able to work in Norway. Citizens of EU/EEA/EFTA countries, with some exceptions, no longer need to apply for a residence permit, but they are still required to register with the police. The Directorate of Immigration (UDI) is the central agency responsible for processing work and residence permit applications. Their website contains comprehensive information about different kinds of permits and about how to apply. Information is available in over twenty languages.
udi.no

SERVICE CENTRE FOR FOREIGN WORKERS

SUA is a cooperation between the Labour Inspection Authority, the police, the Tax Administration and UDI. At SUA, you can sort out everything you need to work in Norway. The aim is to process your applications quickly and provide guidance in several languages. You can get help at SUA if you're a foreign worker, a foreign self-employed person, a family member of a foreign worker or the employer of a foreign worker. At the centre, you can apply for a residence card, a tax card and a Norwegian national identity number, the latter being essential for a number of public and private services in Norway, for example opening a bank account, telephone subscriptions, signing up for a General Practitioner, buying insurance etc.
sua.no

People coming to Norway who are not skilled workers/specialists or EU/EEA nationals need to register with the police.
politiet.no

BRING YOUR FAMILY

The Directorate of Immigration (UDI) serves as the primary agency overseeing the processing of work and residence permit applications. The website offers various forms for work, family reunification, visas, study permits, citizenship, and asylum. It also provides information on statistics, case processing times, fees, settlement permits, travel documents, and all application forms. It's important to be familiar with the diverse types of permits available, noting that permits for Family Reunification typically have a duration of one year. You must apply for renewal three months before your permit expires

udi.no

It is important to be aware of Norwegian laws and regulations in regards to child rearing. Violence against children is illegal in Norway. This applies to all forms of violence including corporal punishment and use of physical violence in child rearing. bufdir.no

IMPORTING GOODS

CUSTOMS (TOLL)

It's important to note that Norway has specific laws governing the import of various items, including household goods, food, plants, and animals.

For instance, if you plan to bring a car to Norway, you'll be obligated to pay import tax. While there's an option to seek dispensation for the temporary use of a vehicle registered outside Norway, it's advisable to initiate this process before your move to Norway in certain cases. Norwegian Customs and Excise (toll.no) will provide information about these regulations.

CARS

Motor vehicles may not be imported into Norway duty-free as household goods. More information about vehicle importation (customs and excise duties) is available from Tollvesenet at toll.no.

Before a foreign-registered car can be used in Norway, certain conditions stipulated by the Norwegian Public Roads Administration (Statens Vegvesen; vegvesen.no) must be met.

The local traffic stations are:

- Stavanger: Christian August Thoringsveg 12, 4033 Stavanger
- Egersund: Krossmoveien 281, 4370 Egersund
- Haugesund: Kvaløygata1, 5537 Haugesund

HOUSEHOLD GOODS

Current duties are available on the Norwegian Customs and Excise (Toll og Avgiftsdirektoratet) website, toll.no.

You may import your personal and household goods free of duty and value added tax (VAT), provided that all goods are used and imported for personal use in Norway. You must pay duty and VAT on any new items.

IMPORTING PETS, FOOD, AND PLANTS

The Norwegian Food Safety Authority (mattilsynet.no) is the government agency responsible for veterinary and animal health matters. It places heavy restrictions on importing pets, food, and plants. It is a good idea to contact them before you move to ensure that you will not encounter difficulties bringing your belongings into the country.

RENTING PROPERTY

The range of rental properties in cities and surrounding regions varies based on market conditions. It's an active market with properties being quickly snapped up. Rental prices, determined by location and size, are higher closer to the city center. Agreements typically span three years, extendable to five, with a deposit equal to one- or three-months rent. Rental prices are usually reviewed annually. The Tenants Association (Leieboerforeningen) safeguards tenant interests, providing advice and services on tenancy agreements. Visit lbf.no for details.

Properties for rent are advertised by letting agents and owners. Check Finn (finn.no) for rental properties. One of the most crucial aspects of finding housing in Norway is starting your search early. Given the highly competitive rental market, it's recommended to commence your search for accommodation well in advance of your intended move-in date.

BUYING PROPERTY

The real estate profession in Norway is highly regulated. Properties for sale are advertised in real estate offices, national newspapers, and on the internet. Options include Finn (finn.no) and Stavanger Aftenblad (aftenbladet.no), the largest newspaper in the Stavanger region, focusing on properties in Friday and Saturday editions.

Individual properties usually have fixed viewing days and times. To buy a property, submit a binding bid to the real estate agent, including financing information. You must obtain a loan commitment certificate from a bank before you start to look at properties. The seller can accept or reject any bid, however once the seller has accepted the bid it is legally binding.

FINANCING

Contact your bank representative for available financing options and details on the property purchasing procedure.

THE REGION

ROGALAND

Rogaland County is situated on the southwest coast of Norway with Stavanger as its administrative centre. With over 450.000 inhabitants out of Norway's 5,5 million, the population is concentrated in the Stavanger region.

Rogaland's primary industries revolve around energy, processing, shipping, and food production, with the Stavanger business region being a hub for the energy sector, contributing to robust business revenues exceeding the national average. The agricultural sector in Rogaland, particularly in the Jæren area, thrives due to favourable climatic conditions, professional expertise, and longstanding traditions. Agriculture is the second-largest industry, following the dominant energy sector.

THE STAVANGER REGION

The Stavanger Region is the country's third-largest city region. With approximately 350.000 residents, the region boasts a robust economy and is the fastest-growing area in Norway. Enjoying a good lifestyle and exciting job opportunities, contribute to its population growth.

Known as "The 20-minute region," it offers accessibility within a short distance and time, connecting residents to work, nature, and amenities. The region hosts many international companies, making it a key player in the energy industry. Stavanger and Sandnes earned the title of European Capital of Culture in 2008, emphasizing the region's cultural significance. Rated as one of the best places to live in Norway, the region welcomes you to experience its unique charm.

Stavanger, the administrative centre of Rogaland County, is a city with a rich history dating back to 1125. Fuelled by the offshore oil industry, it earned the title of Norway's Oil Capital, hosting major companies like Equinor. The city, with its small-town character and historic wooden houses, has experienced economic fluctuations over the years. The post-World War II era brought prosperity with the growth of the oil industry, transforming Stavanger into a prominent business hub.

HAUGESUND

Haugesund, nestled on the western coast of Rogaland County, embodies a captivating blend of maritime heritage, cultural vibrancy, and natural splendour. With its roots deeply anchored in maritime trade and fishing, the city's historic harbour continues to serve as a bustling hub, while nearby Avaldsnes stands testament to its Viking legacy. Haugesund's cultural scene thrives with events like the renowned Norwegian International Film Festival, attracting visitors from far and wide. Amidst the city's rich tapestry of history and culture, the breath-taking landscape of fjords, mountains, and islands beckons outdoor enthusiasts to explore its hiking trails, pristine beaches, and serene waters. Beyond its natural allure, Haugesund's economy has diversified, cementing its status as a dynamic economic centre. Haugesund epitomizes a harmonious blend of tradition and modernity, making it a captivating destination for residents and visitors alike.

EARLY HISTORY

Norway's early history traces back to around 10.000 BC, with the first signs of human habitation discovered in Rogaland and Finnmark.

VIKING AGE (793–1066 AD): The Viking Age saw more than three centuries of exploration and invasions, culminating in the unification of Norway by Harald Hårfarge around 885. The Vikings' mastery of ship engineering and navigation enabled them to spread across Europe, reaching as far as North America in the year 1000.

UNION WITH DENMARK: In the 14th century, Norway entered a union with Denmark due to a royal marriage. The Black Death killed more than half the Norwegian population and contributed to loss of power. Norway was in a Union with Denmark between 1380 and 1814. All sovereignty was handed over to Denmark in 1536. Norway declared independence as a kingdom with the constitution that was signed at Eidsvoll on the 17th of May 1814.

UNION WITH SWEDEN: The constitution was an attempt to avoid being ceased by Sweden after the defeat of Denmark-Norway in the Napoleonic Wars. The plan failed and in August 1814 the Union between Sweden and Norway was a fact. The union ended in 1905 following a conflict over the question of a separate Norwegian consular service.

NORWEGIAN INDEPENDENCE: During World War II, Norway, despite declaring neutrality, was invaded by Germany in 1940. Liberated in 1945 with Allied support, Norway accepted the Marshall Plan and quickly rebuilt. Norway became a NATO member, and in 1952, the Nordic Council was established. Norwegians rejected European Union membership in 1972 and 1994.

MODERN TIMES: Since the discovery of crude oil on the Norwegian continental shelf in 1969, Norway's prosperity has soared. The Norwegian "Oil Fund" now exceeds NOK 15.000 billion, sustaining the economy. The energy industry remains pivotal, contributing to Norway's technological expertise and global influence.

GEOGRAPHY

Norway, a sparsely populated country, boasts vast areas of untouched nature, making it an ideal destination for outdoor pursuits, sports, and enjoying breathtaking views. As the seventh-largest country in Europe, covering 385.000 square kilometres, Norway shares borders with Sweden, Russia, and Finland. Its long coastline is adorned with approximately 50.000 islands, of which only 2.000 are inhabited. The Norwegian landscape features high rugged mountains, scattered plains, fjord-dominated western coastlines, and Arctic tundra in the north. While the western region is marked by steep mountains, the eastern parts showcase rolling countryside. Notably, 72 percent of Norway is mountainous, leaving only 4 percent of the land cultivated.

CLIMATE

Norway experiences mild to warm summers and dark, cold winters, with four distinct seasons—spring, summer, autumn, and winter. The country's climate is milder than expected for its northern latitude, thanks to a combination of humid westerly winds and the warming influence of the Gulf Stream. Temperature variations can be significant, ranging from minus 20-30 degrees Celsius in winter to plus 30 degrees Celsius in summer. North of the Arctic Circle, the phenomenon of the midnight sun occurs during the summer, while winters are characterised by long nights with limited daylight.

POPULATION AND DEMOGRAPHICS

Norway's ethnic and cultural landscape has undergone a remarkable transformation, fuelled significantly by immigration. Surpassing the 5,5 million mark, the country's population now weaves a rich tapestry of diverse backgrounds. Motivated by various factors, individuals from around the world choose Norway as their home, contributing to the ongoing evolution of the nation's cultural mosaic.

Roughly 63 percent of the Norwegian population identifies with Evangelical Lutheran beliefs, adhering to the teachings of the Church of Norway. However, Norway boasts a rich tapestry of religious diversity beyond the predominant Lutheran affiliation. The community encompasses followers of various faiths, including Buddhism, Islam, Catholicism, Jehovah's Witnesses, Baptists, and Judaism, contributing to a vibrant and pluralistic religious landscape.

Indigenous ethnic minorities, such as the Sami, trace their origins to the northern areas above the Arctic Circle. It is crucial to emphasize that the Sami possess a distinct cultural and linguistic heritage. The largest Sami population resides in Northern Norway.

LANGUAGE

Norway recognizes two official languages: Norwegian and Sami. The Norwegian language comprises two forms, Bokmål, and Nynorsk, which, while having significant overlap in speech, are distinctly separated in writing. Nynorsk is primarily used as a written and spoken language in three regions in South Western Norway. Conversely, Bokmål takes precedence in the rest of the country, used in writing by most of the population. Sami enjoys official recognition as a minority language.

MONARCHY

Norway operates as a constitutional monarchy, with the King acting as the ceremonial head of state and devoid of executive powers. The succession to the throne designates Crown Prince Håkon as the next in line. An amendment to the Constitution ensures that the eldest child, irrespective of gender, will inherit the throne if born after 1990.

DEMOCRACY

Norway stands as a democracy, where the people actively participate in selecting their governing authorities. Through the electoral process, citizens cast their votes to choose representatives for the Storting (Norwegian Parliament), as well as for county and municipal governments.

POLITICAL STRUCTURE

In Norway, a structured democratic system operates across three tiers of government: the national, county, and municipal levels. Elections for each of these entities occur every four years, consistently in the middle of September. The constitutional framework, established on May 17, 1814, delineates the powers and responsibilities of the Norwegian government and safeguards the rights of its citizens. The Norwegian Parliament, known as Stortinget, accommodates numerous political parties. However, no single party has commanded a majority for the past two decades, fostering a landscape where political differences predominantly align with the right/liberal and left/moderate groups. The outcome of elections often determines the formation of either a right/liberal or left/moderate coalition government. For comprehensive details about the Norwegian Parliament, its members, administration, and the political system, please refer to stortinget.no, government.no and regjeringen.no.

LAWS

Norway's legal system is governed by laws enacted by Stortinget. Breaking the law, even inadvertently, incurs consequences, emphasising the importance of awareness and adherence to uphold the integrity of the legal system.

SOCIAL RIGHTS

In Norway, individuals enjoy the fundamental rights of freedom of speech and press, allowing them to express opinions within defined boundaries. This encompasses the ability to critique, and protest perceived wrongs, with independent newspapers, radio, and TV stations facilitating diverse viewpoints.

Religious freedom is upheld, granting individuals the right to practice their chosen faith. The country accommodates various religions and a significant agnostic and atheist demographic.

The Norwegian legal system ensures due process, preventing imprisonment without trial and conviction. Laws against discrimination promote equal treatment, safeguarding individuals based on religion, political views, race, nationality, gender, sexual orientation, skin colour, language, or personal beliefs. The Gender Equality Act reinforces equal opportunities for women and men throughout society. For detailed information on rights and legal processes, visit domstol.no and humanrights.uio.no

CULTURE AND PEOPLE

CULTURE

The rich tapestry of Norwegian culture finds its roots in the legacy of the Vikings, the forefathers of modern-day Norwegians.

The Vikings convened at the “Ting,” their regular assembly, where leaders were elected, and disputes were settled through a democratic system of one man, one vote. This historical “Ting” echoes in contemporary Norway through the name of the Norwegian parliament, “Stortinget.” This enduring democratic foundation has instilled strong egalitarian values among Norwegians, emphasizing the belief that all individuals are inherently equal.

Following centuries of union with Denmark, Norway achieved independence on May 17, 1814, marking a significant moment that bolstered national pride.

The 17th of May marks the celebration of independence throughout Norway and in any corner of the world with a Norwegian community. This day holds immense significance for the nation, marked by widespread flag displays across the country. On this occasion, Norwegians wear the traditional Norwegian costume known as “bunad.” These unique designs serve as a cultural emblem, traditionally representing the wearer’s or their family’s specific area of origin. The bunad symbolizes a profound connection to Norwegian identity.

Sporting events are a vibrant showcase of Norwegian pride, with enthusiastic support for skiing, cycling, football, and swimming. Norwegians passionately cheer for their countrymen, creating a colourful and spirited atmosphere. The connection between physical achievements and Norwegian national identity is deeply rooted, likely influenced by the historic success of Norwegian Roald Amundsen, who planted the Norwegian flag on the South Pole in 1911. This achievement has played a pivotal role in shaping the strong link between sporting triumphs and the national identity of Norway.

However, a sense of modesty prevails in Norwegian culture, influenced by the so-called “Law of Jante.” This cultural norm discourages individuals from standing out excessively or highlighting personal skills and achievements. Instead, there is a preference for contributing to the common good and fostering a collective spirit.

This is intricately linked to the societal value of egalitarianism, and the notion that all humans possess equal fundamental worth. This principle is vividly manifested in Norway’s prosperous welfare system and notable strides in gender equality.

The significance of nature in Norwegian culture cannot be overstated. Outdoor activities are deemed essential, fostering a deep-rooted connection with nature. A proverbial Norwegian saying, “there is no such thing as bad weather, only bad clothing,” underscores the ethos that there are no excuses for shying away from outdoor pursuits.

Modern Norway stands as a globalised and culturally diverse nation, drawing inspiration from various corners of the globe. While fundamental values endure, they now harmonise with contemporary global influences. It is this blend that has consistently propelled Norway to be recognised as one of the “best places to live” by the United Nations.

PEOPLE

Norwegians value equality and social harmony, and this is reflected in their societal structures, policies, and cultural norms. Norwegians are known for their appreciation of outdoor activities and a strong connection to nature, given the country’s stunning landscapes. Additionally, they are recognized for their high level of education, technological proficiency, and commitment to sustainability. Cultural attributes such as punctuality, honesty, and a reserved demeanour are also commonly associated with Norwegians.

COFFEE

Indulging in a cup of coffee is a favoured pastime and a significant daily ritual for Norwegians. Whether sipped in the office, at a local café, or shared with a friend, the experience is thoroughly cherished. Norway boasts one of the highest per capita coffee consumptions in Europe.

DRESS CODE

When it comes to clothing, Norwegians often dress casually and functionally. The style is influenced by the climate, with practical and weather-appropriate clothing being the norm. In more formal settings or upscale establishments, people may dress more formally, but overall, there’s a relaxed approach to fashion in Norway. Outdoor activities, such as hiking and skiing, also influence the choice of clothing, with a focus on comfortable and weather-resistant attire.

“DUGNAD”

Norwegians have a unique tradition known as “dugnad,” reflecting their preference for collective efforts and community engagement. Dugnad involves people coming together voluntarily to provide a service or perform work in their free time, without expecting monetary compensation. This tradition fosters a sense of community and shared responsibility. Dugnad activities can range from painting and repairing local facilities like kindergartens to spring-cleaning communal areas in apartment buildings. Engaging in dugnad is not only a practical way to contribute to the community’s well-being but also a social event that brings people together for a common purpose.

EATING OUT

In Norway, when dining out in a group, individuals usually pay for their own consumption, with splitting bills uncommon unless meals are comparable. Service charges are often included in bills, and tipping is not obligatory. However, it is common to round up the bill or leave a small amount as a gesture of appreciation for good service.

GREETINGS AND INTRODUCTIONS

A prevalent greeting in Norway is “hei”. When bidding farewell, the phrase “Ha det ” or “Ha det bra ” is typical, meaning take care. Upon reuniting with friends or family, expressing “takk for sist” is customary, akin to saying, “thank you for last time we met”. Handshakes are the most common form of greeting in both professional and social settings. It’s customary to shake hands firmly, maintain eye contact, and offer a genuine smile. Norwegians appreciate a straightforward and sincere approach in communication. In more informal situations or among friends, a casual wave or nod may suffice.

LUNCH

Most office buildings have their own staff restaurants/ canteens offering cold and hot meals at subsidised prices, but some people still prefer to bring their own “matpakke” (lunch box), often consisting of homemade sandwiches. The lunch break is normally 30 minutes.

MEAL TIMES

Generally, there are 3 to 4 meals per day. Breakfast is normally eaten early, followed by lunch around 11.00–12.00. Dinner is for many the main hot meal of the day around 17.00–19.00. It is not unusual to have “kveltsmat”, which is a snack later in the evening. This is merely a general guide and does not apply to everyone.

MEDIA

Norway stands out for its robust newspaper-reading culture, supported by a comprehensive network of local newspapers covering nearly every region. Prominent national papers, such as Aftenposten, VG, Dagbladet, Finansavisen, and Dagens Næringsliv, are easily accessible online, reflecting the nation’s commitment to staying well-informed.

Norway offers a blend of commercial and publicly owned TV channels and radio stations. Homes are equipped with cable, digital, or satellite TV, providing a diverse array of channels, including popular Scandinavian and English news channels such as CNN or BBC. Despite this, the trend of streaming movies and shows has gained traction.

The Norwegian media landscape adheres to stringent regulations, particularly regarding advertising for tobacco, alcohol, and sugary products aimed at children.

NUTRITION

Norwegians maintain a diverse and healthy diet, emphasizing fish, vegetables, fruit, dairy, and whole grains. The reliance on seasonal produce has decreased due to imported foods. The Norwegian government actively promotes healthy eating, with initiatives supporting fruit, vegetable, and whole grain consumption, alongside efforts to reduce salt intake and encourage physical activity. Rigorous regulations ensure food safety and proper labeling, particularly for products containing genetically modified organisms (GMOs). Norway’s dedication to environmental sustainability fosters a growing awareness, making locally sourced and organic foods increasingly popular.

PETS

Cats and dogs are cherished as popular pets in Norway, often regarded as integral members of the family. Responsible pet ownership is emphasized, including the obligation to clean up after dogs in public spaces. Additionally, there is a legal requirement to leash dogs between April 1 and August 20 to safeguard vulnerable livestock and wildlife.

CABIN CULTURE

Norwegian cabin culture is a national obsession, boasting over 440.000 cabins, cottages, and lodges scattered throughout the country. Cabins are often situated in picturesque landscapes, surrounded by mountains, forests, or near lakes. They offer a tranquil setting for Norwegians to connect with nature and enjoy outdoor activities like hiking, skiing, fishing, and more. The vacation homes range from simple, off-the-grid structures without electricity and plumbing to more luxurious and well-equipped establishments.

PUNCTUALITY

Norwegians tend to be punctual. Arriving late for meetings or appointments would be considered disrespectful. Notify those you are meeting if you are going to be late.

SHOES

It is common practice to remove your shoes when you enter someone’s home in Norway. Wearing outdoor shoes indoors creates a lot of dirt, especially during the wet and snowy seasons. It’s fine to take a pair of shoes to change into.

SOCIAL LIFE

Socializing at home holds a traditional charm for Norwegians, whether it’s a prelude to a night out or a cozy gathering. It’s considered courteous to respond to invitations and strive to be punctual. When invited to a dinner party a small gift for the host or hostess, such as chocolates or flowers, is customary. While unannounced visits are acceptable among close friends, it’s generally preferred to plan visits in advance.

TITLES

Norwegians embrace informality and typically dispense with titles when addressing each other. In business settings, it’s common to use first names, extending this casual approach even to company directors. Similarly, children typically address adults and teachers by their first names, contributing to the overall culture of openness and equality in Norwegian interactions. The Norwegian culture places a strong emphasis on social equality, and using elaborate titles may be seen as counter to this cultural norm.

DIVERSITY, EQUITY AND INCLUSION

Norway is often hailed as one of the most gender-equal countries globally. Strides have been made in education, the labour market, and political spheres, with ongoing efforts to address and improve gender equality in various aspects of Norwegian society. The nation is committed to fostering Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion (DEI), reflecting a broader dedication to creating an inclusive and equitable environment for all.

LGBTQ+

Norway is recognized for its progressive stance on LGBTQ rights. The country has implemented extensive legal protections and anti-discrimination laws for the LGBTQ community. Same-sex marriage has been legal since 2009, granting equal rights and benefits to same-sex couples. Additionally, LGBTQ individuals can openly serve in the military, and adoption rights are extended to same-sex couples. Norway consistently ranks high in global indexes measuring LGBTQ rights and inclusivity, reflecting a society that values diversity and equality. The vibrant LGBTQ community in Norway is supported by various organizations, events, and initiatives promoting inclusivity and awareness.

WINE MONOPOLY AND THE DRINKING CULTURE

The Norwegian government strictly regulates alcohol consumption through taxes and limited access, resulting in higher prices compared to most other countries. Supermarkets can sell beer until 20:00 on weekdays and 18:00 on Saturdays, while wine and spirits are exclusively available at the state-owned “Vinmonopolet” (The Wine Monopoly) for beverages over 4,75 percent alcohol content.

Key details:

- The legal drinking age in Norway is 18 for the purchase of alcoholic beverages with an alcohol content lower than 22%. For beverages with higher alcohol content, the legal age is 20.
- Proof of age may be required.

- Vinmonopolet staff are well-trained to provide product advice.
- Opening hours vary but generally follow Monday–Friday 10:00–18:00 and Saturday 10:00–16:00. Closed on Christian holidays and New Year’s Eve.

Norway has a drinking culture that is influenced by a combination of social norms, legal regulations, and cultural attitudes. Certain cultural events and celebrations may include traditional drinks, such as aquavit at Christmas. It’s important to note that while alcohol is a part of socializing in Norway, individuals vary in their attitudes toward drinking, and some may choose not to consume alcohol at all. Additionally, the drinking culture can differ between urban and rural areas and among different age groups.

WINTER KNOWLEDGE

SALT

Ice on staircases, pathways, or pavements can lead to unpleasant surprises. The simplest solution to clear ice is using salt. Ice forms when water temperature reaches 0 degrees Celsius (32 degrees Fahrenheit). Sprinkling salt on the ice causes it to melt as the salt dissolves into the liquid water within the ice, lowering its freezing point.

TRACTION

Age and fragility are not prerequisites for appreciating extra traction for your feet! There are various designs of snow and ice traction cleats, including stainless-steel crampons. You can opt for metal spikes for snowy conditions or sandpaper traction for days with icy patches. There are even specialized traction cleats designed for running. Most shoe shops and shoe repair stores offer a selection of traction cleats and crampons. This is an affordable investment in your health and safety, enabling you to walk around with ease and without tension.

SHOVELLING SNOW

In Norway, property owners or occupants are generally responsible for shovelling snow outside their houses or dwelling, including clearing sidewalks and paths adjacent to their properties. Municipalities may have specific regulations in place, and it’s advisable to check with the local authorities for any guidelines regarding snow removal. Timely and thorough snow removal is not only a matter of personal responsibility but also contributes to public safety by preventing slips and falls. Additionally, the use of salt or sand on icy surfaces is common to enhance traction.

REFLECTIVE CLOTHING

In Norway, using reflective clothing in winter is essential for safety, given the extended periods of darkness and challenging visibility conditions. The country’s emphasis on safety during winter extends to pedestrians, cyclists, and those engaged in outdoor activities. Reflective clothing, including jackets, vests, and accessories, enhances visibility and reduces the risk of accidents, particularly in areas with limited lighting. This practice is crucial for individuals commuting to work or school, participating in winter sports, and those working outdoors. Reflective elements are often integrated into clothing and accessories, contributing to the country’s commitment to ensuring the well-being of its residents during the dark winter months.

WINTER TYRES

By November 1st, summer tires must be replaced. You can choose between winter tires and studded tires, but both must meet safety standards, with a minimum tread depth of 3 mm. Studded tires excel in braking on snow and ice but come with drawbacks such as noise and higher fuel consumption. In this region, 91% prefer regular winter tires for a quieter ride and increased comfort on clear asphalt. They contribute to lower friction eliminating the need for a specific date to switch back to summer tires. In Norway, set dates dictate the switch from studded to summer tires, and cars must use summer tires from the first Monday after Easter until October 31, unless winter conditions persist.

BANKS AND BANK CARDS

For non-residents moving to Norway, opening a bank account is a straightforward process, however one must have a D-number or National identity number (fødselsnummer). It could take a few weeks to receive your D number. Also, the bank requires identification documents such as a valid passport and proof of address. Some Norwegian banks may have specific requirements for non-residents, so it's advisable to check with the chosen bank. Many banks offer online account opening options, allowing individuals to initiate the process remotely. Non-residents should be aware of any fees associated with different account types and banking services. Additionally, understanding the bank's policy on non-resident account holders is crucial. While many Norwegians speak English, confirming whether the bank provides services and documents in English can be helpful. To receive your salary, you need to open a Norwegian bank account. Norwegian banks provide various services, including online and mobile banking, credit and debit cards, loans, and investments.

When opening an account, be sure to ask for its International Bank Account Number (IBAN) and the bank branch's Bank Identifier Code (BIC-code or also called SWIFT-code) which will ease and speed any international transfers made from or to the account.

It is more common to use bankcards than cash in Norway. Cheques do not exist.

Additionally, the popular mobile payment app Vipps, widely used in Norway, enables convenient transactions, splitting bills, and making payments using just a mobile phone number.

POSTAL SERVICE

Selected grocery stores collaborate with the country's postal service, Posten Norge, to offer postal services through the "Post i Butikk" (Post in Store) program. This initiative allows customers to access basic postal services, such as sending and receiving mail and packages, purchasing postage stamps, and more, conveniently within the grocery store. The integration of postal services into grocery stores aims to enhance accessibility for customers, providing a one-stop solution for both grocery shopping and basic postal transactions.

Personal letterboxes at your residence are only for receiving post. Outgoing post must be deposited at the post office or in the post boxes located around town.

Reduce junk mail by applying an "ingen reklame" (no advertisement) sticker, easily obtained from your local postal service.

For details of services download APP Posten or see posten.no

WATER

In apartments, the monthly service charge typically covers water supply and sewage expenses. For those residing in houses, the municipality provides water and sewage services, with associated charges typically included in municipal service bills, which encompass refuse collection as well.

CAR

In Norway, automobile liability insurance is mandatory, covering liability to individuals and property damage up to a specified limit, with the driver included in this coverage. While other types of insurance, such as personal accident, theft of personal belongings, or collision, are not legally required, traffic (or third-party liability) insurance is a prerequisite for using a vehicle in Norway and must be obtained before customs approval.

Vehicles arriving from outside Europe typically lack this insurance, and a 30-day coverage can be purchased at a customs office in such cases. For vehicles arriving from European countries, a green card serves as proof of insurance, but its validity may be limited after taking up residence in Norway. It is advisable to secure a Green Card insurance valid for at least two months during the importation process. If your current Green Card insurance expires, acquiring Norway traffic (third-party liability) coverage becomes mandatory.

Once a foreign car is imported and registered with Norwegian plates, it can be insured by a Norwegian insurance company.

DRIVERS LICENSE

Everyone coming to Norway to live can use their driver's license for a 3 month period. After 3 months it is important to be aware of the different rules that apply:

EU/EEA and UK:

You are allowed to drive in Norway with a valid license. Alternatively, you can exchange your license for a Norwegian one by submitting your current license and you'll receive the Norwegian license by mail without having to take the practical or theory test. If you acquired an EU/EEA driving license by exchanging a license from a non-EU/EEA country, the regulations of the original issuing country usually apply, and you can use it in Norway for up to three months.

Japan and Switzerland:

May exchange within one year of arrival to Norwegian licence without having to take any practical or theory tests.

Australia, Canada, Greenland, Hong Kong, Israel, Monaco, New Zealand, San Marino, South Korea, and USA:

Can obtain Norwegian drivers' licence by taking a practical test within one year.

If you have a full driving licence from a non-EU/EEA country that is not on the list above, you have to obtain your driving licence in the same manner as a first-time applicant. You are exempt from some parts of the basic traffic course, but you do have to complete the compulsory night driving instruction, first aid and behaviour in the event of an accident.

CAR REGISTRATION

When purchasing a new or used car from a dealership, the registration process is typically handled by the dealer on your behalf. However, if you import a car, you are responsible for completing the registration after the necessary importation formalities have been fulfilled. To initiate the registration, you should bring the duly completed and approved import forms, evidence of your National Identity Number, valid liability insurance proof, along with the car and its previous registration documents to any authorized vehicle station. toll.no

The registration of your imported car includes a thorough inspection to verify compliance with EU standards, emission requirements, and adherence to Norwegian motor vehicle regulations, which are largely aligned with EEA (EU and EFTA) vehicle regulations. Subsequently, after successful registration, your car will be subjected to periodic inspections for both roadworthiness and emissions. This inspection, commonly referred to as 'EU Inspection' (EU-kontroll), is conducted in accordance with EU directives and can be performed at any accredited garage or authorized test station. The scheduling of these inspections is determined by the last digit of your car's number plate, indicating the year and month for the mandatory inspection. If the number is odd, the inspection occurs in odd-numbered years. vegvesen.no

TOLL ROADS

The Stavanger region, like many other regions in Norway, has toll roads as part of its transportation infrastructure. Toll roads are commonly used to fund the maintenance and improvement of transportation infrastructure, including roads and bridges.

AUTOPASS

IDENTIFICATION

In Norway, individuals commonly show identification using a Norwegian passport, driving license, or Bank ID for various purposes. While there is no legal requirement to carry ID at all times, it is practical to have a valid form available, especially in situations such as age verification, accessing public services, or engaging in official transactions. Non-citizens may use a residence permit card. Law enforcement officers carry official police identification, and citizens may be required to show ID to authorities or service providers when requested.

LIVING EXPENCES

Living expenses in Norway are notably high, reflecting the country's strong economy and high standard of living. Housing costs, whether for renting or buying, are substantial, especially in urban centres. Additionally, groceries and dining out can be expensive due to the high quality of local products and imported goods. Transportation costs, including public transport and owning a car, add to the overall expenses. Utilities such as electricity and heating are also significant, particularly during colder months. Despite these high costs, Norway offers excellent public services, healthcare, education, and social benefits, contributing to the country's renowned quality of life.

WORKING CONDITIONS

WORKING HOURS

As an employee in Norway, you have the right to know when and how much you will work. Ordinary working hours are also regulated, ensuring that you do not work too much and when you are entitled to overtime remuneration.

As a rule, normal working hours in Norway are:

- 9 hours within 24 hours (normal workday)
- 40 hours in 7 days (normal work week)

If there are any exceptions, they are typically specified in your employment contract. A standard collective agreement in Norway, for example, typically prescribes a 37.5-hour workweek. This agreement is negotiated between an employer or employers' organization and a labour union or employee representative. It comprehensively defines the terms and conditions of employment, covering aspects such as wages, working hours, benefits, and other employment-related matters for the employees included in the agreement.

Read more about working hours here: arbeidstilsynet.no

BREAKS

An employee is entitled to at least one break if the daily working hours exceed five and a half hours. If an employee is required to stay at the workplace during the lunch break or if there is no suitable break room available, the break is to be considered part of the working hours. Read more about breaks here: arbeidstilsynet.no

OVERTIME

Overtime is work in excess of the limits for ordinary working hours. Employees are entitled to additional pay for overtime work. Overtime cannot be a regular arrangement, and the employer can only use overtime in special situations. Read more about your working conditions here: arbeidstilsynet.no

SELF EMPLOYMENT

If you are not a citizen of an EU/EEA country, and are planning to run a business in Norway, you need to have a residence permit that will allow you to work here. TAX

If you're coming to Norway to work for a Norwegian employer, it's essential to pay tax on all your earnings. Upon arrival, register at the tax office to obtain an online deduction card. Use either a D-number or national identity number each time you work in Norway. Most foreign workers who are new in Norway will automatically become part of a voluntary tax scheme called PAYE (Pay As You Earn) when they apply for a tax deduction card. Under this scheme, you're taxed at a fixed percentage that your employer deducts from your salary.

The online tax deduction card indicates the amount your employer must deduct before paying your wages. To calculate the correct deduction, the local tax assessment office requires information on your expected earnings in Norway and the duration of your stay. To apply for an online tax deduction card, present a valid passport, residence or work permit, your employment contract with the Norwegian employer, and your Norwegian D-number or national identity number. Your employer will automatically access the information.

TAX RETURN (SELVANGIVELSE)

Between March and April, individuals working in Norway or on the Norwegian continental shelf can anticipate receiving a tax return from the Norwegian Tax Administration. This document offers a detailed overview of your income, deductions, assets, and debts for the preceding income year. It is essential to meticulously review the information in the tax return to verify its accuracy and completeness. If no modifications are required, there is no obligation to submit it. It will be considered submitted with pre-completed information on 30 April. However, if changes are necessary, the deadline for making adjustments and submitting the tax return is 30 April.

HOW TO SUBMIT YOUR TAX RETURN

There is no need to act if there is no change to any of the information on your tax return. The Norwegian Tax Administration will assume that you have checked the information and that it is correct.

You must tell the Norwegian Tax Administration that you are moving in cases where you intend to stay abroad for at least six months. You must report the move no more than 14 days before your departure.

Reporting a move abroad does not mean that your liability to pay tax in Norway ends.

For more information go to Skatteetaten.no

WHAT HAPPENS IF YOU HAVE PAID TOO MUCH OR TOO LITTLE TAX?

After you have submitted your tax return, the Norwegian Tax Administration will process the information in it and prepare a tax statement. The tax statement will indicate whether you have paid too much or too little tax. You will be refunded any excess amount if you have paid too much tax. You must pay any amount that you owe if you have paid too little tax.

PAYSLIP

In Norway, the standard practice is to arrange for monthly wage payments directly into your account. Subsequent to the payment or in close proximity, your employer is obligated to provide you with a pay slip (lønnslipp). This document comprehensively outlines your gross salary, tax deductions, and any other applicable deductions. It also specifies your net pay after taxes and details the calculation method for holiday pay. In the event that you do not receive a payslip, it is essential to promptly request one from your employer.

UNIONS

Trade Unions play a significant role in Norway's economic history and development. Today, they serve as valuable sources of information. Unions in your home country may have established connections with their counterparts in Norway. While joining a trade union in Norway is not compulsory, it is widespread and commonly practiced.

HOW TO CHECK YOUR TAX RETURN

1. CHECK THE INFORMATION

Every month, your employer will send you documentation of the salary you have been paid and how much tax has been deducted. Each January, your employer will also send you an annual statement showing your salary payments and tax deductions for the previous year. When you receive your tax return, you must check the information against this documentation.

2. CHECK WHETHER YOU ARE ENTITLED TO A DEDUCTION

You may be entitled to make deductions for various expenses from your taxable income. These are referred to as 'deductions', and you must add these to your tax return yourself.

3. FILL IN ANY ADDITIONAL INFORMATION

If you are a foreign employee and have worked for a foreign company in Norway or have worked for a Norwegian or foreign company on the Norwegian continental shelf, you should complete the "additional information for foreigners" section of the tax return. This is important in order that you receive a correct tax statement.

4. CHECK THAT YOUR ADDRESS IS CORRECT

Always make sure your address is correct.

BANKS AND BankID

When moving to Norway, most people opt to open a Norwegian bank account, a procedure that usually takes around 4 weeks, as you must have your national identity number or D-number. It is advisable to ensure you possess a bank card that is operational in Norway to facilitate seamless financial transactions during this interim period.

VALID PASSPORT/ID

If you have a valid passport, you must prove your identity at a local bank office after you have sent them your application to become a customer online.

In addition, they need

- an Asylum seeker certificate or residence permit
- D-number

OBTAIN A BankID

HOLIDAY

The general rule in Norway stipulates that all employees have the right to annual leave (ferie) and corresponding holiday pay (feriepenger). The entitlement is 4 weeks and 1 day, however many people have 5 weeks of vacation per year through collective agreements.

Employees possess both the right and obligation to utilize their entire holiday entitlement, and it is the employer's responsibility to ensure that the employee takes the full holiday. The timing of the holiday cannot be freely chosen, and if there are specific plans, employees must seek the employer's permission at least two months prior to the holiday.

In cases where an agreement cannot be reached, the employer holds the final decision. However, employees can request a continuous three-week holiday during the primary holiday period, spanning from June 1st to September 30th. Holiday pay replaces the regular salary and constitutes a minimum of 10.2% of the gross salary. This pay is earned in the year preceding its disbursement (the holiday year) and must be paid when the employee takes a holiday the following year or when their employment with the company concludes. For individuals aged 60 and above, the rate increases to 12.5% of the gross salary, and an additional week of holiday is granted.

TERMINATION OF EMPLOYMENT:

UNDERSTANDING THE PROCESS AND YOUR RIGHTS

If an employer decides to terminate your employment, there must be a justifiable reason for this action. The termination notice (oppsigelse) must be provided in writing. During the notice period, which is generally one month unless otherwise specified in your employment contract, you have the right to continue working and receive payment. The notice period begins from the 1st of the month following the issuance of the notice.

In instances of a severe breach of your employment contract, the employer can opt for dismissal (avskjed). This results in the immediate termination of the employment contract, and you are required to cease working at once. arbeidstilsynet.no

If you have lost your job or put on furlough, you may be entitled to unemployment benefits from NAV. Read more about it here: nav.no

04 LIVING IN THE STAVANGER REGION

Living in the Stavanger region offers not only natural beauty and cultural richness but also a well-developed health system and excellent educational opportunities. With a welcoming atmosphere and a strong sense of community, living in the region offers a balanced and fulfilling lifestyle for residents of all ages.

EDUCATION AND CHILDCARE

The importance of education can be seen in the implementation of the Education Act in 1739. Today Norway provides 10 years of compulsory education and three years of optional secondary education for all. Secondary schools offer internationally recognized education programmes, and the Stavanger region offers world leading research institutions and an international university.

Norwegian children commence compulsory schooling at age 6, mandated by a ten-year attendance requirement. Years 1 to 7 constitute primary school (barneskolen), while years 8 to 10 comprise lower secondary school (ungdomsskolen). The subsequent three years in upper secondary school (videregående skole) are optional. To celebrate the end of upper secondary school the students become RUSS.

RUSS

In Norway, the term "Russ" refers to high school graduates engaging in a vibrant and unique celebration known as Russ. This tradition unfolds in the weeks leading up to national exams, marked by participants donning colourful overalls and caps to signify their graduation status. The Russ celebration exudes a lively and festive atmosphere, featuring a series of events, parties, and challenges. Groups of Russ may rent buses, creatively decorating them to serve as mobile party venues during the festivities. The colour of the overalls indicates the graduates' academic focus. Culminating on May 17th, Norway's National Day, the Russ celebration adds an extra layer of joy to the country's patriotic festivities.

Education at the primary and secondary levels is universally provided by national, regional, or local governments, adhering to the national curriculum from the Norwegian Ministry of Education and Research. The upper secondary level offers pathways to either a vocational diploma or a higher education entrance qualification, with specialized schools focusing on music, drama, sports, etc.

Distinctly, Norwegian schools do not enforce a uniform policy for children.

FUNDING:

Municipalities own and fund primary and lower secondary schools, while upper secondary schools are under the ownership and funding of county administrations (fylkeskommuner). Primary and lower secondary schools offer textbooks, notebooks, and essential supplies at no cost, while upper secondary students are responsible for purchasing their required materials.

Higher education institutions in Norway, except for private universities, do not impose tuition fees for Norwegian citizens, only minimal administration charges each semester, covered by the Ministry of Education and Research. Despite this, many students opt for loans or grants through the public Lånekassen (State Educational Loan Fund) to manage living expenses. Free tuition also applies to students who are citizens of EU/EEA or Switzerland.

Support from Lånekassen is typically granted to Norwegian citizens, but foreign citizens with legal residence in Norway may also be eligible for financial assistance during upper secondary, college, and university education.

Visit lanekassen.no for more information, available in English as well. For more information about the education system read: udir.no

OUTSIDE SCHOOL HOURS

Municipalities must provide afterschool activities (SFO) for children in grades 1 to 4, with an extension for those with special needs up to grade 7. SFO offers subsidized play and cultural activities before and after school, requiring a fee from parents (no fee in first grade). Operating hours vary but are generally from 07:30 to 16:30.

SPORTS AND EXTRACURRICULAR ACTIVITIES

Publicly funded schools have limited sports offerings, while diverse extracurricular activities are popular outside the school system. Local sports clubs and the Norwegian Confederation of Sports provide additional options. Arts, crafts, and other activities may be limited at schools, with some options available in SFOs or arranged privately. Prices and quality vary.

COUNTY/FOLK HIGH SCHOOLS

Folkehøgskoler are private boarding schools focusing on special interests after upper secondary school. They emphasize social activities but offer no official exams or degrees. For more details, visit folkehogskole.no

INTERNATIONAL SCHOOLS AND EDUCATION

DAYCARE/PRESCHOOL OPTIONS

For children under the age of six, a variety of daycare/ preschool options, referred to as "kindergartens" (barnehager in Norwegian), are available in the region. The operating hours generally range from 07:30 to 16:30.

Explore the following types of kindergartens:

- Open Kindergartens (many residential areas have a ÅPEN BARNEHAGE)

For children aged 0-5 who attend with parents/grandparents/ caregivers. Encourages play, learning, and social interactions.

- Public Kindergartens

Norwegian barnehage, or kindergartens, represent a cornerstone of the country's early childhood education and care system. These institutions provide a nurturing and stimulating environment where children aged one to six engage in play-based learning, outdoor exploration, and social interaction. With a curriculum centered around interests and developmental needs, children learn through creative activities and foster essential skills for their future academic and social success.

- Family Kindergartens

Children receive care in private homes, supervised by regular kindergartens.

- Private Family Kindergartens

Approved to care for five to ten children aged 1 to 6 years. For details, contact the specific kindergarten.

- Special Needs Kindergartens

Priority enrollment for children with special needs.

Note: Children's parks are not considered true kindergartens. They provide supervised play conditions on a part-time or full-time basis. Apply directly to the children's park.

Registration for kindergartens is typically done through your municipal website. Be aware of the deadline to apply in your municipality as these may vary, the deadline is often within mid-February to the beginning of March. Municipalities may have a shortage of institutions, so early registration is advised.

NON-EMERGENCY MEDICAL TREATMENT

When the issue is non-urgent or falls within regular weekdays (08:00 – 16:00), please reach out to your designated general practitioner (fastlege). You can locate their name, address, and contact number in the correspondence you received from the Norwegian Health Economics Administration (HELFO) helfo.no. In the event that your general practitioner is unavailable, the medical clinic (legekontor) will assist in redirecting you to another qualified doctor.

For medical inquiries over the phone during regular hours, contact your general practitioner directly. If you have a medical situation after office hours (after 16:00) or if you do not have a designated general practitioner, please call legevakt 116117.

GENERAL PRACTITIONER (GP)

Each person registered in Norway is assigned a General Practitioner (GP). If you are unsure who your GP is, you can reach out to the GP Helpline (fastlegetelefonen) at 23 32 70 00 or visit helsenorge.no

You hold the right to change your general practitioner twice per calendar year. For more details, please refer to the provided link: tjenester.helsenorge.no

FEES

Under the Norwegian National Insurance Scheme, an annual limit is imposed on patient user fees, covering charges for medical consultations with doctors, specialists, and specific prescription medications. The Parliament establishes this cap each year. Upon reaching the limit, you will automatically receive a fee exemption card (frikort). Any amount exceeding the limit will be promptly refunded to your designated bank account. More information can be found at helsenorge.no

There is a standard subsidized fee for a routine consultation with your general practitioner. If you are referred to a specialist, an additional subsidized fee applies. It's important to note that these fees undergo annual adjustments. Consultations for children under the age of 16 and for pregnant women are exempt from charges. More information can be found at helsenorge.no

Should the need arise, your general practitioner can refer you to a specialist or facilitate treatment at your local hospital. In addition, they can assist in arranging treatment at a hospital outside your area. It is free to be admitted to hospital.

Dentistry designed with you in mind

Oris Dental has several clinics in the Stavanger region, with general dentists, specialists, and dental hygienists. We will take the time to listen to you, understand your needs and provide high quality dental treatment in a safe environment. Our clinics have varied opening hours, in the event of a dental emergency, we guarantee you a same day appointment.

Smiles that last

orisdental.no

 ORIS DENTAL

Outpatients pay a subsidized user fee. More information can be found at helsenorge.no

Note: If you go to a private clinic or healthcare centre, they may operate both a subsidized and a private practice. The latter is not included in the National Insurance Scheme, and you must pay the fees in full yourself. If in doubt, check in advance.

EUROPEAN HEALTH INSURANCE CARD

If you are a member of the Norwegian National Insurance Scheme and are staying temporarily in another EEA country or in Switzerland, you should carry a European Health Insurance Card (EHIC). The card covers you for emergency healthcare in Europe and is free of charge. It is, however, advisable that you have additional travel insurance.

You can apply for the EHIC via www.helfo.no.

HEALTHCARE CENTRES

Each municipality has a public healthcare centre (helsestasjon) that is free of charge. The health centre offers regular consultations according to a standardised programme of 14 consultations. The first consultation is a home visit for newborns. The consultations at the health centre are carried out until the child is four years old.

Healthcare centres offer the following services:

- Pre- and postnatal check-ups
- Follow-up consultations with midwives during pregnancy
- Obligatory check-ups for all children up to the age of 5
- Vaccination programmes for all children below school age
- Healthcare information for youth up to the age of 20

Note: These are not clinics for normal medical consultations.

Visit your kommune's website or google to find your local helsestasjon.

PRIVATE MEDICAL CLINICS/HOSPITALS

Private medical centres/hospitals offer a wide range of treatments. You have access to their facilities and specialists, as well as the option of choosing one of their doctors as your general practitioner.

Note: Before scheduling an appointment for a consultation or treatment not covered by the National Insurance Scheme, it is advisable to inquire about the associated costs. Private treatments and consultations may incur substantial expenses, so unless you have private health insurance it's advisable to check the pricing details in advance.

PREGNANCY

All pregnant women are entitled to free check-ups with their midwife and/or General Practitioner (GP). A total of nine pregnancy consultations, encompassing fetal diagnostics and ultrasounds, are provided as part of this service.

Additionally, if you and your healthcare provider, whether it be your GP or midwife, mutually determine that further consultations are necessary, you may be offered additional appointments. You will be given an Antenatal Health Card which gets filled in. Bring the card with you to each consultation.

For more information check helsenorge.no

MIDWIFE

Midwives (jordmødre) in Norway are highly trained and specialise in all aspects of prenatal care, delivery, and postnatal care for you and your baby. Unless complications occur during labour, the midwife will deliver your baby. Every municipality is required by law to have a midwife.

There are also private, English-speaking midwives in Stavanger, and their services include prenatal and postnatal care as well as Pap smears and acupuncture. femjordmodre.no meretesultra.no

BIRTH

In Norway, most women give birth at a hospital, and the baby's father (or other companion) can attend the birth.

As a member of the Norwegian National Insurance Scheme, you receive free medical care during the birth of your baby, and your hospital stay is also free. Let the hospital staff know what language you speak so the appropriate midwife can be assigned. helse-stavanger.no

Midwives play a crucial role in optimizing your resources during childbirth, guiding you through techniques such as controlled breathing, adopting upright and active positions, incorporating movement, massage, and relaxation methods. A diverse array of pain relief options is at your disposal, including acupuncture, nitrous oxide (gas and air), pethidine (demerol), and epidural anesthesia. These options remain available throughout labor and do not require pre-booking.

At Stavanger University Hospital, the birthing process takes place in the delivery ward or the birth loft (fødeloftet).

The birth loft is specifically designed for women seeking a natural birth experience in an intimate, home-like setting, with the incorporation of non-medical forms of pain relief.

Following delivery, you and your family can remain together in the birth loft for 24 hours before heading home, fostering a supportive and personalized postpartum environment.

More information on childbirth helsenorge.no

Note: Planned home birth with a midwife is not provided for under the Norwegian public health service.

THE POSTNATAL WARD

A pediatrician will conduct an examination of your baby when they are at least six hours old, typically on the day following birth.

As breastfeeding assistance is often needed, the hospital staff will provide support with feeding and offer guidance on practical aspects of infant care. Typically, discharge occurs one to three days after a normal delivery and within this timeframe, you can choose when you feel ready to return home.

The hospital will notify the tax administration of the birth and national identity number will be issued. It is essential to inform the tax administration of your child's name within six months. Subsequently, you will receive the child's birth certificate. For more information skatteetaten.no

POSTNATAL CHECK-UP

Upon your departure from the hospital, your Public healthcare centre (helsestasjon) is expected to reach out. Several municipalities offer a home visit. During this visit, you can have your baby weighed, and any concerns or issues can be discussed. If the health centre does not initiate contact, feel free to reach out to them proactively and let them know that you are home.

The healthcare centre (helsestasjon) diligently monitors your child's development throughout the early years of school, offering valuable information, advice, vaccinations, and regular check-ups.

BREASTFEEDING SUPPORT

Breastfeeding is the norm in Norway. You will get all the breastfeeding support you need at the hospital, even if you require help at every feeding for several days. If you choose not to breastfeed, baby formula is available. Breastfeeding support: ammehjelpen.no

IMMUNISATION

All children's vaccinations are free. Please contact your local health station for more details.

If you wish for your baby to receive a Hepatitis B shot at the hospital, it is important to make a specific request for it. Additionally, your baby will receive a tuberculosis (TB) vaccination at 6 weeks old if one or both parents hail from a country with elevated rates of tuberculosis.

TUBERCULOSIS

People from countries with high rates of tuberculosis must contact the Tuberculosis Control Office within three months of arriving in Norway.

You will normally receive a letter from your local municipality with information about when and where you should go for the skin test and chest x-ray (persons from 15 years up). If you do not receive this letter, you should contact the public health nurse or chief municipal medical officer where you live. Tuberculosis tests are free in these instances.

DINING AND NIGHTLIFE

Stavanger's culinary scene is a delicious tapestry that blends the rich maritime heritage of fresh seafood with contemporary international influences. From Michelin-acclaimed fine dining to trendy bistros and casual eateries, the city offers a diverse range of flavors. Local produce and a commitment to quality ingredients characterize the menus, with a strong emphasis on seafood. Stavanger's food culture extends beyond the plate, with vibrant food markets, craft beer havens, and specialty coffee spots adding to the city's gastronomic allure. Whether you're a seafood enthusiast, a coffee connoisseur, or an adventurous foodie, Stavanger invites you to savor the tastes of its dynamic culinary landscape.

TIPPING

In Norway, tipping is not obligatory as service charges are often included in bills at restaurants and cafes. While it is customary to leave a small tip as a gesture of appreciation for good service, rounding up the bill to the nearest convenient amount is a common practice. Tipping taxi drivers, hotel housekeeping, and tour guides is discretionary but often appreciated. Unlike some countries, there is no pressure to tip excessively, and service staff typically receive fair wages. Ultimately, tipping in Norway is more about expressing gratitude for exceptional service rather than fulfilling an obligatory custom.

GLADMAT FOOD FESTIVAL

Gladmat Food Festival, held annually in Stavanger, Norway, is a culinary extravaganza that transforms the city into a vibrant hub of gastronomic delights. Spanning several days, the festival showcases a diverse range of Norwegian and international cuisine, featuring dishes from renowned chefs, local restaurants, and food vendors. Attendees can explore food stalls, witness culinary competitions, and enjoy workshops and demonstrations. The festival's lively atmosphere includes live music, cultural performances, and family-friendly activities. With a commitment to sustainability, Gladmat emphasizes local and seasonal ingredients, making it a delightful celebration of food and culture in the heart of Stavanger. For the latest information, it's advisable to check the festival's official website or local sources. gladmat.no

NIGHTLIFE

Stavanger's nightlife pulses with energy, offering a diverse and exciting tapestry of entertainment for night owls. From the cozy charm of local pubs to the vibrant beats of nightclubs, the city caters to all tastes. Craft beer enthusiasts can savor a variety of brews in trendy bars, while music lovers can explore live performances spanning genres from indie to electronic. Stroll along the waterfront, where bars provide a perfect backdrop for evening socializing against the scenic harbor views. As the night unfolds, cultural venues and late-night eateries beckon, ensuring that the excitement never wanes in Stavanger's lively nocturnal landscape. Whether you're seeking the rhythms of the dance floor or a relaxed evening with friends, Stavanger's nightlife promises an unforgettable experience.

Sandnes, as a neighbouring city to Stavanger, also has its own unique nightlife scene. While it may not be as extensive as Stavanger's, Sandnes offers a variety of options for those seeking evening entertainment. While not as sprawling as its neighbor Stavanger, Sandnes offers an intimate and authentic experience for those seeking an evening of exploration. Picture yourself in neighborhood bars where the locals unwind or discover a hidden gem that transforms from a cafe to a lounge as the night descends.

Haugesund's nightlife, though quaint compared to larger cities, pulses with local charm and diverse offerings. A variety of bars and pubs dot the town, providing a welcoming atmosphere for socializing and sampling drinks. While nightclubs may be limited, Haugesund offers dance venues for those looking to move to the beat. The waterfront setting adds an extra layer of allure, with bars providing stunning views for a relaxed and picturesque night out.
